MAXWELL FRACTURES SKULL

Will Organize Young Democrats

Montgomery and Carrigan Sponsor Organization Plan

Expect To See Active Work Carried Into Counties of State.

DEMOCRATS WANTED

"Apostles of DePriesthood" Not Be Admitted To Membership.

Determined that Arkansas shall remain steadfastly true to the principles of Jeffersonian democracy and traditions of the South, two local youths have inaugurated a campaign against DePriesthood, religious-political alliances and other political menaces by the organization of an Arkansas League of Young Democrats, modeled along the lines suggested by Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, and W. J. Holloway, governor of Oklahoma.

Democratic political zeal, kindled in the two boys' distributed literature for state and county candidates, has led William Carrigan and James Montgomery, both of Hope, to foster organization of the young men and women democrats of the state, their actions spurred on by outbursts of Illinois' negro congressman and Virginia's buckteering bishop. The two boys, both college students, have communicated with Governors Roosevelt and Holloway and expect to be guided by the experience of these leaders in organization work.

Both young Carrigan and Montgomery are members of southwest Arkansas families, prominent in the business, and political life of this section. Carrigan is a law student at George Washington University, Washington, D. C., and Montgomery is a student at Hendrix college at Conway. Both have taken keen interest in political matters since early high school days and are anxious to perfect at least the initial plans for a state-wide organization before returning to their respective schools next month.

"It will be a democratic organization," the youths assert, "and there is not room in its ranks for any young man or woman tainted with the odor of republicanism—and no one who supported Mr. Hoover or is an apostle of DePriesthood will be admitted."

A meeting is expected to be called next week to perfect temporary organization and put under way plans for carrying the campaign into every county in the state.

Graf Speeds On Across Pacific

Advised By Radio of the Weather Conditions Along U. S. Coast.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24. (AP)—Boring her way through a thick fog near the center of the Pacific ocean, the dirigible Graf Zeppelin was today rapidly approaching the half-way mark in her pioneer flight across the northern Pacific from Tokyo to Los Angeles.
In constant touch by radio with both sides of the ocean, the bulky mistress of the air is enabled to make the most of weather reports. The story of the flight, pieced together from messages intercepted by radio operators in the United States, show that the air liner is increasing her speed as it heads more directly east all the time and is sailing about 1300 feet above the water.

A message sent by the ship at four o'clock this morning, E. S. T., said the ship had covered 1600 miles in the little more than 26 hours since leaving Japan. She is showing an average speed of 67 miles per hour, this taking into account her slow progress in the first few hours of her flight.

Stiff Schedule Is Facing Tigers

Coach Foy Hammons To Steer Squad Through Hectic Season.

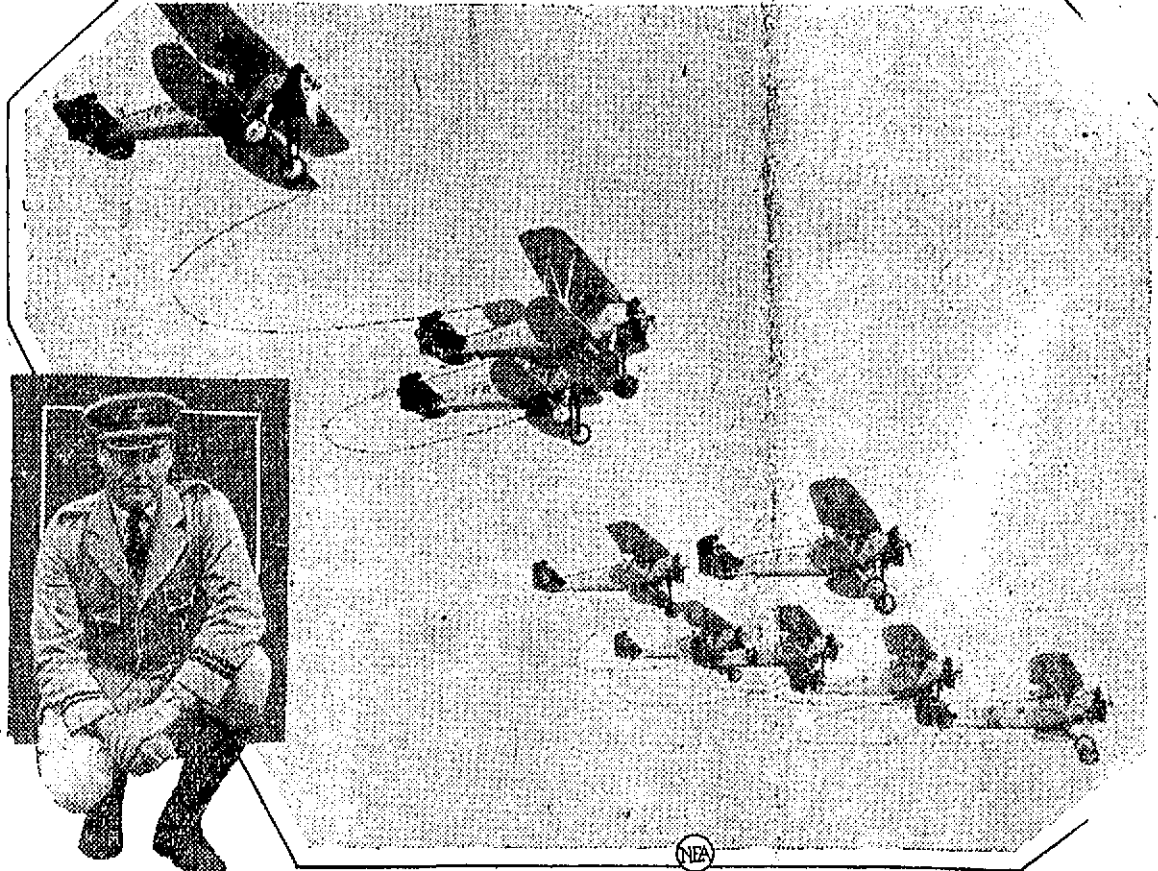

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Aug. 24. (AP)—Although shot to pieces by graduation and by strict scholastic requirements, the Ouachita College football squad of 1929 will be able to give a good account of itself in a stiff schedule which includes Vanderbilt University at Nashville.

That announcement was given to followers of the Tigers by Coach Foy Hammons before he left to attend a coaches school at Waco, Tex.

Hammons said his squad will be reinforced by a number of likely candidates from the high school ranks.

The coaching staff, with Hammons in charge, and William Brashier, former Tiger star as his assistant, will remain as last year. Four teams that were not on the 1928 schedule have been booked for games this season. Ouachita will open the season with the Magnolia Aggies at Hope, September 27. The game with Vanderbilt at Nashville will follow on October 5. State Teachers College will come to Arkadelphia for a game October 11, and the Tigers will play Louisiana Poly at Ruston October 18.

Navy's Crack Flyers to Strut Stuff at Cleveland

There they go, folks—hold everything! Their planes tied together with ropes just to show how they can be maneuvered in unison, "The Nine High Hats," crack navy flyers and fighting aces of the U. S. S. Saratoga, will loop the loop, fly upside down and perform other thrilling stunts at the National Air Races in Cleveland. Their final thrill is "the three-ring squirrel cage," in which three sets of planes loop the loop independently, each plane chasing the tail of its predecessor less than 100 feet ahead. The nine planes are shown above with Lieutenant L. E. Gehres, flight leader, in the inset.

Many Killed and Injured In Arab Assault Upon Jews.

LONDON, Aug. 24. (AP)—The British colonial office announced today that "action has been taken to enable local authorities to restore and maintain order in Jerusalem where bitter fighting between Jews and Arabs occurred yesterday."

British bombing planes are on the scene, transport planes are en route and a battalion of infantry was dispatched to the city last night.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 24. (AP)—Late official reports this afternoon said that 18 Arabs and 11 Jews and more than 150 wounded on each side in the fighting which began yesterday over rights to worship at the "Wailing Wall."

Wolfgang von Weisell, correspondent for the Berlin Cossack-Zeitung, is in a serious condition from knife wounds received during the fighting.

As a result of the trouble, martial law has been proclaimed and no one will be allowed on the streets after six o'clock. A strict censorship on telegrams going abroad and on the press has been established.

Hope Girl Wins Scholastic Honors

Miss Margaret Bell Ranks High In Colorado University.

Miss Margaret Bell, a Hope girl who has been attending the summer term of the University of Colorado, holds the distinction of being the only member in her class scoring a mark of 100 in each of her two English tests. The class is doing post-graduate work, the students representing many of the different states.

Miss Margaret is a graduate of Hope high school and of the University of Arkansas. At the latter place she was a classmate of Louise McPhetridge, now Mrs. Thaden, leader in the women's national air derby.

Earl Seerest returned yesterday from Fayetteville, where he has been attending the summer session at the University of Arkansas.

Eyes of Nation Turned Skyward

Cleveland Center of Aviation Interest As Fliers Close Up.

(By The Associated Press)
The eyes of America turned skyward today.

Far out over the Pacific the Graf Zeppelin was blazing a new trail to Los Angeles on next to the last lap of her round the world flight.

Converging on Cleveland were three aerial derbies—the "Powder Puff" derbies from Santa Monica, the first flight section of a group of men aviators who took off from Portland, Ore., yesterday, and the second flying from Miami Beach to Cleveland.

Somewhere on the air road between Roosevelt Field and Los Angeles Captain Roscoe Turner is attempting to set a new record in a one-day east-west transcontinental flight.

On the broad bosom of a river near Annapolis, Md., H. Al Williams is tuning up his tiny flying boat, "Mercury," with which he hopes to win the world's speed laurels in the Schneider cup races in England in September.

Over Chicago drones one of the ubiquitous endurance planes, the "Chicago We Will," striving to break the record set by the St. Louis Robin.

And at Cleveland where the Aerial Exposition opens next week fliers from all over the country are gathered to show and demonstrate ships of high and low degree and the latest thing in gliders.

Legal Contest of Sunday Shows Is Promised In Hope

District Attorney Carrigan To Act On Tomorrow's Performance.

SAENGER PREPARED

Sunday Afternoon Shows Now Held In Five Arkansas Cities.

Sunday afternoon picture shows, which have been running from time to time all summer here, will be tested in the courts.

Notice was served on the Saenger theatre yesterday by District Attorney Steve Carrigan that prosecution would follow the showing of "The Rainbow Man," the event which has been advertised for this Sunday afternoon. "The Rainbow Man" is a benefit performance under the auspices of the American Legion, which has been sponsoring Sunday afternoon shows at the Saenger all summer.

Complaint Made
No statement was forth coming from the district attorney's office but complaint has been made to Mr. Carrigan, it is understood, and Manager Jack Eaves of the Saenger received due notice according to law that action would be started if the show were held this Sunday.

Manager Eaves announced that his company would open the theatre regardless, and that "The Rainbow Man," Eddie Dowling's famous old movie minstrel piece, would be shown as advertised, Sunday afternoon. It is understood that the Public Saenger company has re-

The Southwest Arkansas Farm

The following is an excerpt from "The Farm Credit Situation in Southwestern Arkansas," University of Arkansas bulletin No. 237, prepared by B. M. Gile, which has just been received in Hope. The bulletin, which may be obtained free by writing Dean Dan T. Gray, College of Agriculture, Fayetteville, Ark., shows that the Hope-Magnolia district has probably made the greatest progress toward diversification of any cotton section in Arkansas. The Star is publishing an excerpt from the bulletin every day.

Sources of Credit

No new institutions have been organized in southwestern Arkansas in recent years for the purpose of making seasonal loans to farmers. There has been, however, a great shift in the relative importance of the various sources of short-term loans. Following the Civil War the disrupted economic condition of the farmers resulted in the credit merchant becoming the chief source of credit for the small farmer. To a considerable extent this situation continued until after the World War. The local banks, since their resources were fully profitably employed in supplying credit to the merchant during the crop growing season, generally were not aggressive in supplying the farmer credit directly. Few, if any, banks encouraged the farmers to borrow from them. The discounting of paper for the cotton factor furnished a profitable business during the time when the volume of credit occasioned by the growing of the cotton crop was small.

This attitude of the banks toward the farmers of course did not change suddenly. In the years prior to the World War there was a rising tendency for bankers to encourage more farmers to arrange for credit with them and thereby obtain their supplies at cash prices. The growth in bank resources helped to modify the attitude of the banks. Moreover, after the slump of 1920, wholesale houses became more critical of their merchant accounts and also reduced the volume of credit extensions offered them. This forced the merchants in turn to curtail the amount of credit they would extend farmers. On the other hand, the exposed prices of goods in chain stores and the prices quoted by mail order houses, gave the farmer a standard with which to compare credit prices. The savings to be made by buying for cash were commonly 25 to 50 per cent. At the same time the bankers had come to have a better appreciation of the value of having the successful farmer's account. The result of all these new forces has been a relative increase in the volume of seasonal credit obtained from banks as compared with that from credit merchants.

In 1927, 72 per cent of the owners and 71 per cent of the share and cash tenants in the Hope-Magnolia district obtained their seasonal credit from the banks, 14 per cent of owners and 13 per cent of tenants from merchants, and 1 and 5 per cent, respectively, from private sources. Ten tenants obtained 11 per cent of their seasonal credit from their landlords without a commission. The banks were serving almost as large a percentage of the tenants as owners. This situation is explained, partially at least, by the fact that about half of the upland tenants are related to the owners. On the basis of field observation, it is believed that the use of mercantile credit in the Hope-Magnolia district has declined as much if not more than in any other cotton district of the state.

Sergeant In Local Guard Unit First Accident Victim

Clarence Maxwell Steps From Moving Car and Falls.

CONDITION BETTER

Accident Is First To Happen At Camp This Year.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 24.—An examination is being made today at Baptist hospital to determine the extent of injuries received last night by Sergeant Clarence Maxwell, Company "A," 153rd Infantry, Hope, in an accident in North Little Rock.

Maxwell had not regained consciousness up to noon today.

Sergeant Clarence Maxwell, of "A" company, Hope unit of Arkansas National Guard, suffered a fractured skull, a leg, and a shoulder, when he stepped from the running board of a moving car and fell to the pavement just within the city limits of North Little Rock.

Maxwell was riding the side of a car driven by Sergeant E. O. Eason, also of Hope and a member of the same company. They were enroute from the camp into Little Rock.

Just after the car reached North Little Rock, coming in on the Conway pike, the wind blew Sergeant Maxwell's hat off. Eason slowed down to stop but Maxwell stepped down from the car while it was still in motion, and fell.

His head struck the concrete and he was knocked unconscious. Eason and his companions picked up the injured man and carried him back to camp where he was given attention in the camp hospital. His condition is serious but it is thought he will recover.

Young Maxwell is an electrician, specializing in radio engineering. Recently he spent several weeks in the government radio school at Fort Benning, Ga., selected from among enlisted men in the State Guard because of his proficiency in that branch of the service. He is associated with Jack Frazier in radio work here.

A telegram to Star this morning from Sergeant Eason, in civil life an employee of this newspaper, advised that Maxwell's condition was somewhat improved but that he was still in bad shape.

Summary of Prohibition.

ONE of the most interesting discussions on national prohibition appears in the current issue of Time, weekly news-magazine, which has condensed the recent newspaper articles by Mabel Walker Willebrandt into a single chapter. Mrs. Willebrandt makes three points:

"Prohibition is not effectively enforced.

"Prohibition can be effectively enforced.

"Imperfect as it is, prohibition has materially lessened liquor in the United States."

The former Assistant Attorney General thinks the dry agents in the field are less to blame than the officials at Washington. "It will take many a day for law enforcement to recover from the setback it suffered under General Lincoln Andrews," she declared. "His notorious appointments—Roscoe Harper . . . Frank Hale . . . Major Walton Green . . . Ned M. Green . . . I refuse to believe that out of 100,000,000 population and perhaps 20,000,000 who believe in prohibition, 4,000 agents cannot be found who cannot be bought!"

With Mrs. Willebrandt's conclusions observed above, this newspaper is in thorough sympathy. Whatever the shortcomings of prohibition, its present form still has the confidence of the nation. The law has never been enforced. The nation knows that—and until it is enforced, and proven definitely a success or failure, prohibition will continue to be the warmest political issue in America.

No one doubts Mrs. Willebrandt's strenuous effort in behalf of prohibition, or her sincerity; but there is room for doubt as to her judgment.

Last fall she labored long and hard for Republican success. She told it in every city and township that the issue between the Republican and Democratic parties was prohibition. If she meant to help prohibition it is a paradoxical fact that her efforts did much to injure it. What you have read in her statement above was written many months after America's "solemn referendum on prohibition."

The years Mabel refers to, were Republican years . . . Harding, Coolidge, Hoover. And now, discouraged but still hopeful, even Mabel has quit, and is watching the chaos at Washington from the neutral station of a newspaper correspondent.

Mabel blames the politicians—"Politics and liquor," she says, "are as inseparable a combination as beer and pretzels." Maybe did her bit last fall, soldering a tin halo on the Republican elephant. Wasn't she as guilty as the others, placing party success above common honesty?

There is no question but that some political party ought to take charge at Washington and spend ten times the past appropriations to give prohibition a fair trial. But it took a Willebrandt to convince America that the Republicans, with 90 per cent of their strength in wet territory, were the chosen party!

Why Income Tax?

YESTERDAY, I made an income tax report to the state of Arkansas and accompanied it with a check. So many other people are doing the same thing for the first time that it is worth while to think out loud about it.

The income tax law costs me money. I'm glad of it. For a long time I have wanted to pay income tax to the state of Arkansas provided everybody else who makes enough money did the same thing. It costs money, but when I get through paying it, along with all the other taxes I pay, the total is not nearly enough to pay for the service which the state of Arkansas and its various sub-divisions furnish to me and every other resident.

For a number of years I lived in Arkansas before I paid any taxes except poll tax and a small personal tax. During that time I had one child attending the public schools of Fort Smith. All the tax I paid during those years wasn't enough to pay one month's tuition a year for my child in a private school offering the same facilities as the public schools.

Four years ago I bought a house. Since then I have paid considerably more taxes. When I bought the house, my net worth didn't increase a penny. But my contribution to government was increased about five times because I had bought something tangible. That certainly wasn't equitable. I was more able to pay taxes before I bought the house than I was afterwards.

Since I bought the house, I have had two children in school. If I had to pay tuition for them in a private school of equal merit, the cost would be about three times as much as my total tax bill. That takes no account of the many services which are performed by city, county and state government.

There are other people in Arkansas, many of them, who pay taxes on as much or more property, and earn less net income. There are others with much larger incomes and little or no tangible property. The income tax begins to even things up. I'm paying more taxes, but I'm still paying far less than the service is worth. It costs me money, but I'm glad of it. It's costing some other people money who have been riding free.—C. F. Byrns, in Fort Smith Southwest American.

A pretty Lively Corpse, Eh. Wot!

WASHINGTON LETTER

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON. — President Hoover's seemingly grim determination to cut down military and naval expenditures may yet be seen to be based on a conviction that a troublesome financial situation looms ahead of the government.

In fact, if he isn't successful and a business recession comes along, talk of tax reduction may be replaced by suggestions of tax increases before the end of his first administration.

One of the most interesting facts about government expenses is that a share of the responsibility for suddenly mounting federal expenses may be properly awarded to Mr. Calvin Coolidge.

It looks as if Cal, with his passion for economy, had put off many of the new major expenditures generally considered necessary until they all piled up into Hoover's administration.

Cal has left office with a matchless reputation for economy and Hoover is left holding the bag. He may escape serious embarrassment by spreading out prospective expenditures over long periods, but he cannot possibly follow Coolidge along the economy lane because the days of penny-pinching are necessarily over for some time to come.

Hoover has boldly proposed a $5,000,000 appropriation to enlarge the federal prison system and end the present serious condition of overcrowding.

That's an excellent example of what Hoover has been left to contend with by the combined Coolidge policy of economy and inaction.

Just at the tail-end of the Coolidge administration several expensive projects were finally acted upon. But the money must be provided in Hoover budgets. And there are new things coming up which will take more. The fixed costs of government continue to mount. Even Coolidge couldn't stop that. The cost of government for the fiscal year 1920 was $205,000,000 higher than for 1919. Nearly $60,000,000 of this increase was in Army and Navy expenses.

We have a cruiser program that will cost $250,000,000 unless some of it is abandoned, another hang-over from the Coolidge administration.

Work has barely begun on the $150,000,000 public buildings program. The Hoover administration will have to raise most of the money.

Flood control has already taken an appropriation of some $25,000,000, but in the broad program contemplated as a permanent measure estimates of cost run from $500,000,000 to $750,000,000.

The five-year program for development of military and naval aviation started well back in Coolidge's second term, but the biggest expenditures for its completion are yet to come. Army barracks are in terrible shape—Coolidge was sore when high army officers squawked about them—and appropriations must be made for new construction and repair.

The Federal Farm Board is lending money rather than giving it away, but it has $500,000,000 to lend which must come out of the treasury, to say nothing of its outlay in administrative expenses.

One hasn't heard much lately about the proposed St. Lawrence Canal, but that's another expensive project. Meanwhile the next regular session will undoubtedly start which it will cost—shredded—appropriating the $165,000,000 which it will cost to build Boulder Dam. The government expects to recover the money, but the dam must be built first and the amortization will take 50 years. If Muscle Shoals legislation is passed more expensive presumably will be involved.

A $15,000,000 program for hospitalization for neurological and psychiatric cases among war veterans was headed off by Mr. Coolidge, but here again is something that will have to be carried out.

One could think of more forthcoming expense if it were necessary. But that's enough. Enough, at least, to indicate that government expenses and revenues must be one of the president's chief worries.

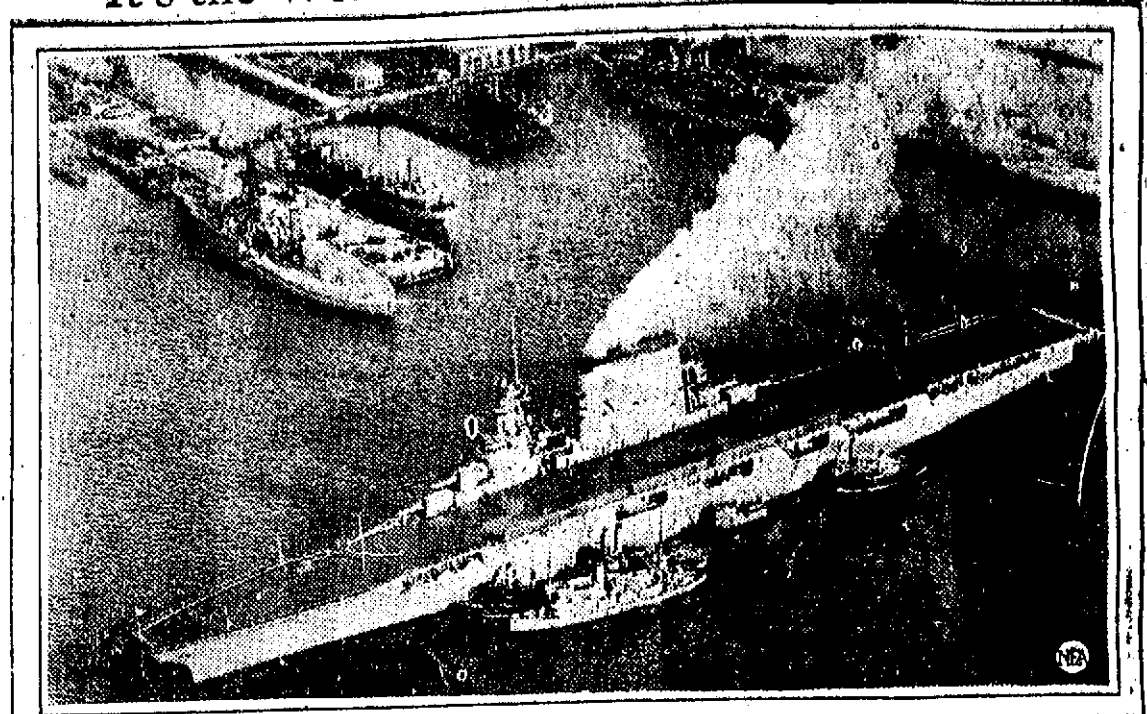

"IT CAN BE DONE" IS NEW TRYON FARCE AT GRAND

Blazoning the popular Universal star, Glenn Tryon, with Sue Carol at the lead of its celebrities, "It Can Be Done," a side-splitting comedy farce, will open at the New Grand theatre Monday and Tuesday.

As may be surmised from the title, "It Can Be Done" deals with the adventures of a young man who is afflicted with a demoralizing inferiority complex. The struggles of this chap with his handicap are logically and faithfully portrayed not only offers a solution of these difficulties but it sugar-coats that solution behind such a mirth-provoking series of riotously funny incidents that the lesson strikes home with a pleasant and amazing force.

The story is the brain-child of Mann Page and Edward J. Montagne and the adaptation was done by Earle Snell and Nan Cochrane with Joseph Franklin Poland handling the continuity.

This . . . answers the question . . . which is America's finest medium-priced automobile

The Oakland All-American Six was compared with twenty other cars in 878 individual comparisons. Of the 878 points of comparison, Oakland established clear-cut superiority on 451 or 51.37 per cent. The twenty cars combined proved at best to be equal to Oakland on 382 points or 43.50 per cent. Yet thirteen of these cars are higher-priced than the All-American Six . . . Let us give you complete returns of this analysis. Then you will know that here is America's finest medium-priced automobile.

What these features mean to you

Large piston displacement is needed to develop high power at moderate engine speed. Moderate engine speed is an important factor in the life of a car.

Fisher bodies are famous for style, luxury and roominess. In addition, they hold such advantages as sturdy hardwood and steel construction, VV windshield, side cow ventilation and adjustable drivers' seats.

Only Oakland and two other cars in the field offer bodies by Fisher. And one of the two is nearly $100 higher in price than Oakland. Of the 18 cars which have less-known bodies, 11 are priced above the All-American Six.

How Oakland compares with the field

Oakland's 228 cubic inch piston displacement is greater than 12 of the 20 cars in its price field. Of the 8 remaining cars, 7 are higher priced than Oakland.

Now, the figures in that item were from the Arkansas Gazette, and the statement was made that Yerger had conducted a negro training school here for 56 years. As a matter of fact, Yerger has been teaching here only 46 years, the training school having been established 17 years ago.
